

So many conspiracy theories about Corona !!!
And here comes my version

Conspiracy theories are flourishing in the midst of the Corona crisis. “Evil forces” are believed to be behind the pandemic, with talk of compulsory vaccination and surveillance. There are so many theories. Some of them:

It all started with a bat

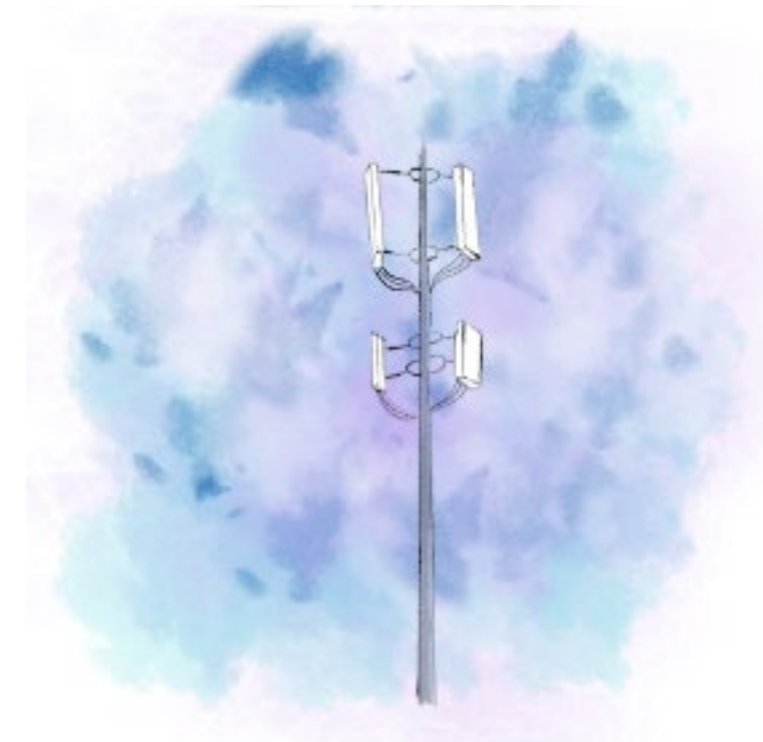

What is currently considered scientifically probable is that the novel coronavirus was transmitted to humans in wild animal markets in China. Originally, the virus would have evolved in the bat.

The intermediate host was then the pangolin, whose meat is considered a delicacy in China. It is even said to have healing properties - at least so far.

Bill Gates wants to inoculate and monitor humanity by force

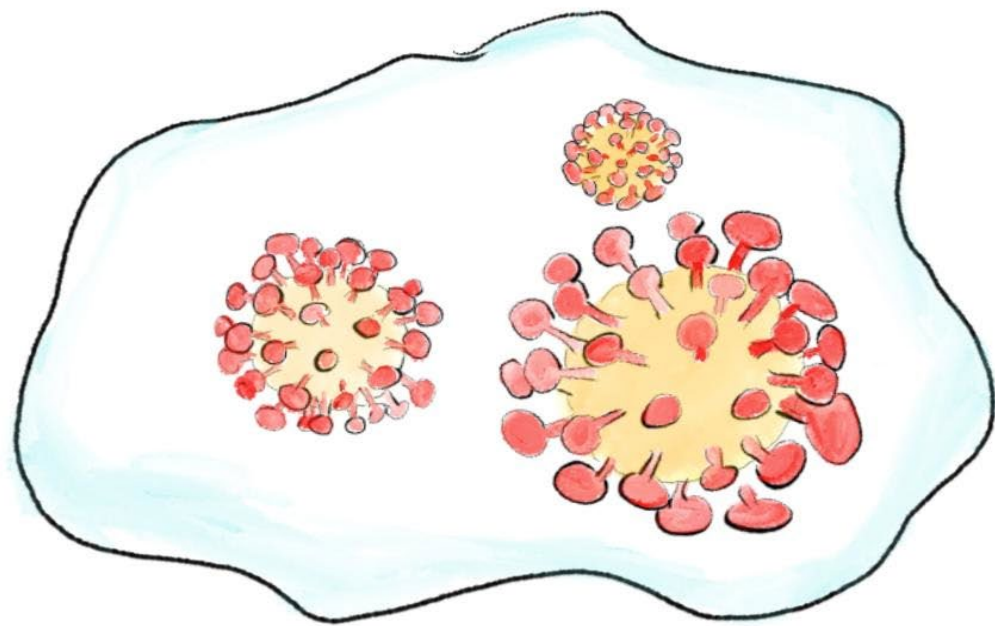

The population should be forced to be vaccinated because of their fear of the coronavirus. Money-hungry businessmen around Microsoft founder Bill Gates have already applied for a patent on the vaccine. In this way, a tiny microchip could be injected into the body to gain “total control” over people. Gates could then implement his long-prepared plan to depopulate the world.

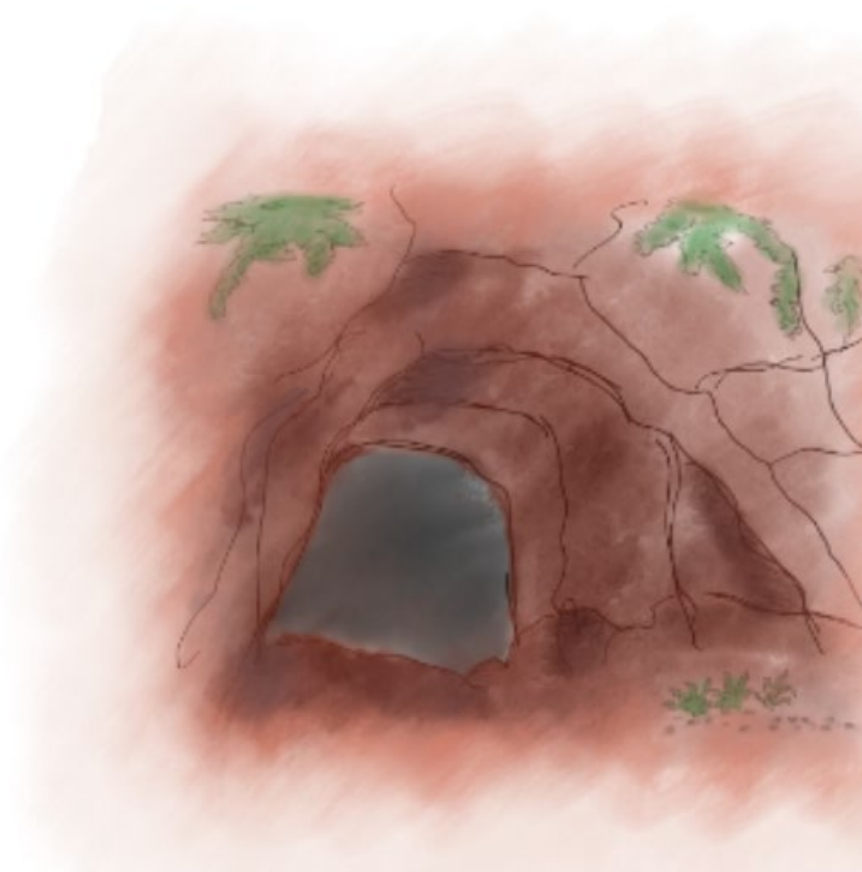

5G spreads the coronavirus

The new 5G transmitter masts are responsible for the spread of the coronavirus. In Great Britain, fires were therefore set under many masts. People in Wuhan are also said to have fallen ill and died from 5G radiation, but not from the virus. Alternatively, the radiation could also activate the virus in the first place. In Africa there are no corona deaths because there is no 5G network there.

Hi, it's me, Brooke! Since Corona's appearance in all the media, several theories have surfaced about where the virus came from. I don't know which one to believe. That's why I have come up with my own fantasy theory. Come with me and I'll lead you through my conspiracy theory.

This is Yamai. She is Chinese and lives in Wuhan. In her spare time she likes to go climbing in the Himalayas. She loves nature and the adrenaline kick she feels while climbing. One day a heavy thunderstorm came up and she had to take shelter in a cave in the rock.

So that she would not be cold Yamai collected wood to make a fire in the cave. For a while she listened to the crackling of the fire. But suddenly she heard a strange sound coming from deep inside the cave. The sound came closer and closer. And suddenly she saw a pair of glaring eyes in the darkness. Yamai's heart was pounding in her pants.

A bat came out. The bat circled around the cave a few times until it finally sat down on a branch. Yamai could not believe her eyes. The bat turned into a human. She had never seen anything like it before. She thought she was dreaming.

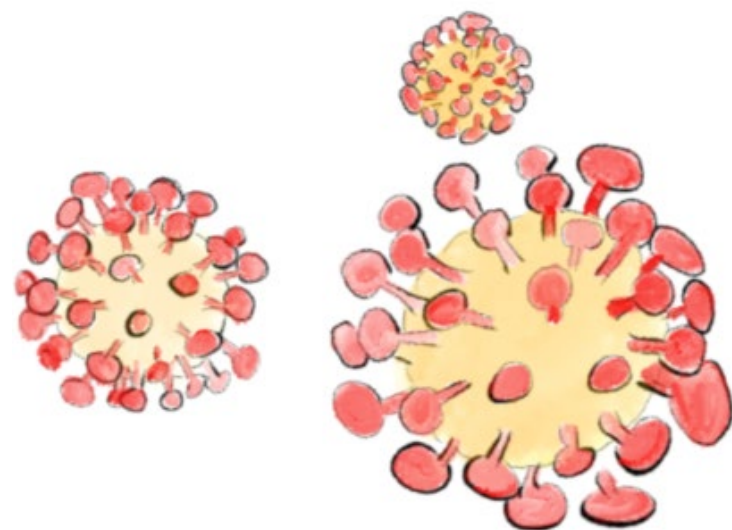

But it was no dream, the man was standing next to her in reality. How could that be?

The mysterious man approached Yamai. She crouched on the ground, trembling with fear. She wanted him to disappear, but he came closer and closer. Then he began to speak with gentle words:

While the two sat next to each other and Yamai listened attentively to his story, the batman transmitted viruses to her. Later known to us as Covid-19.

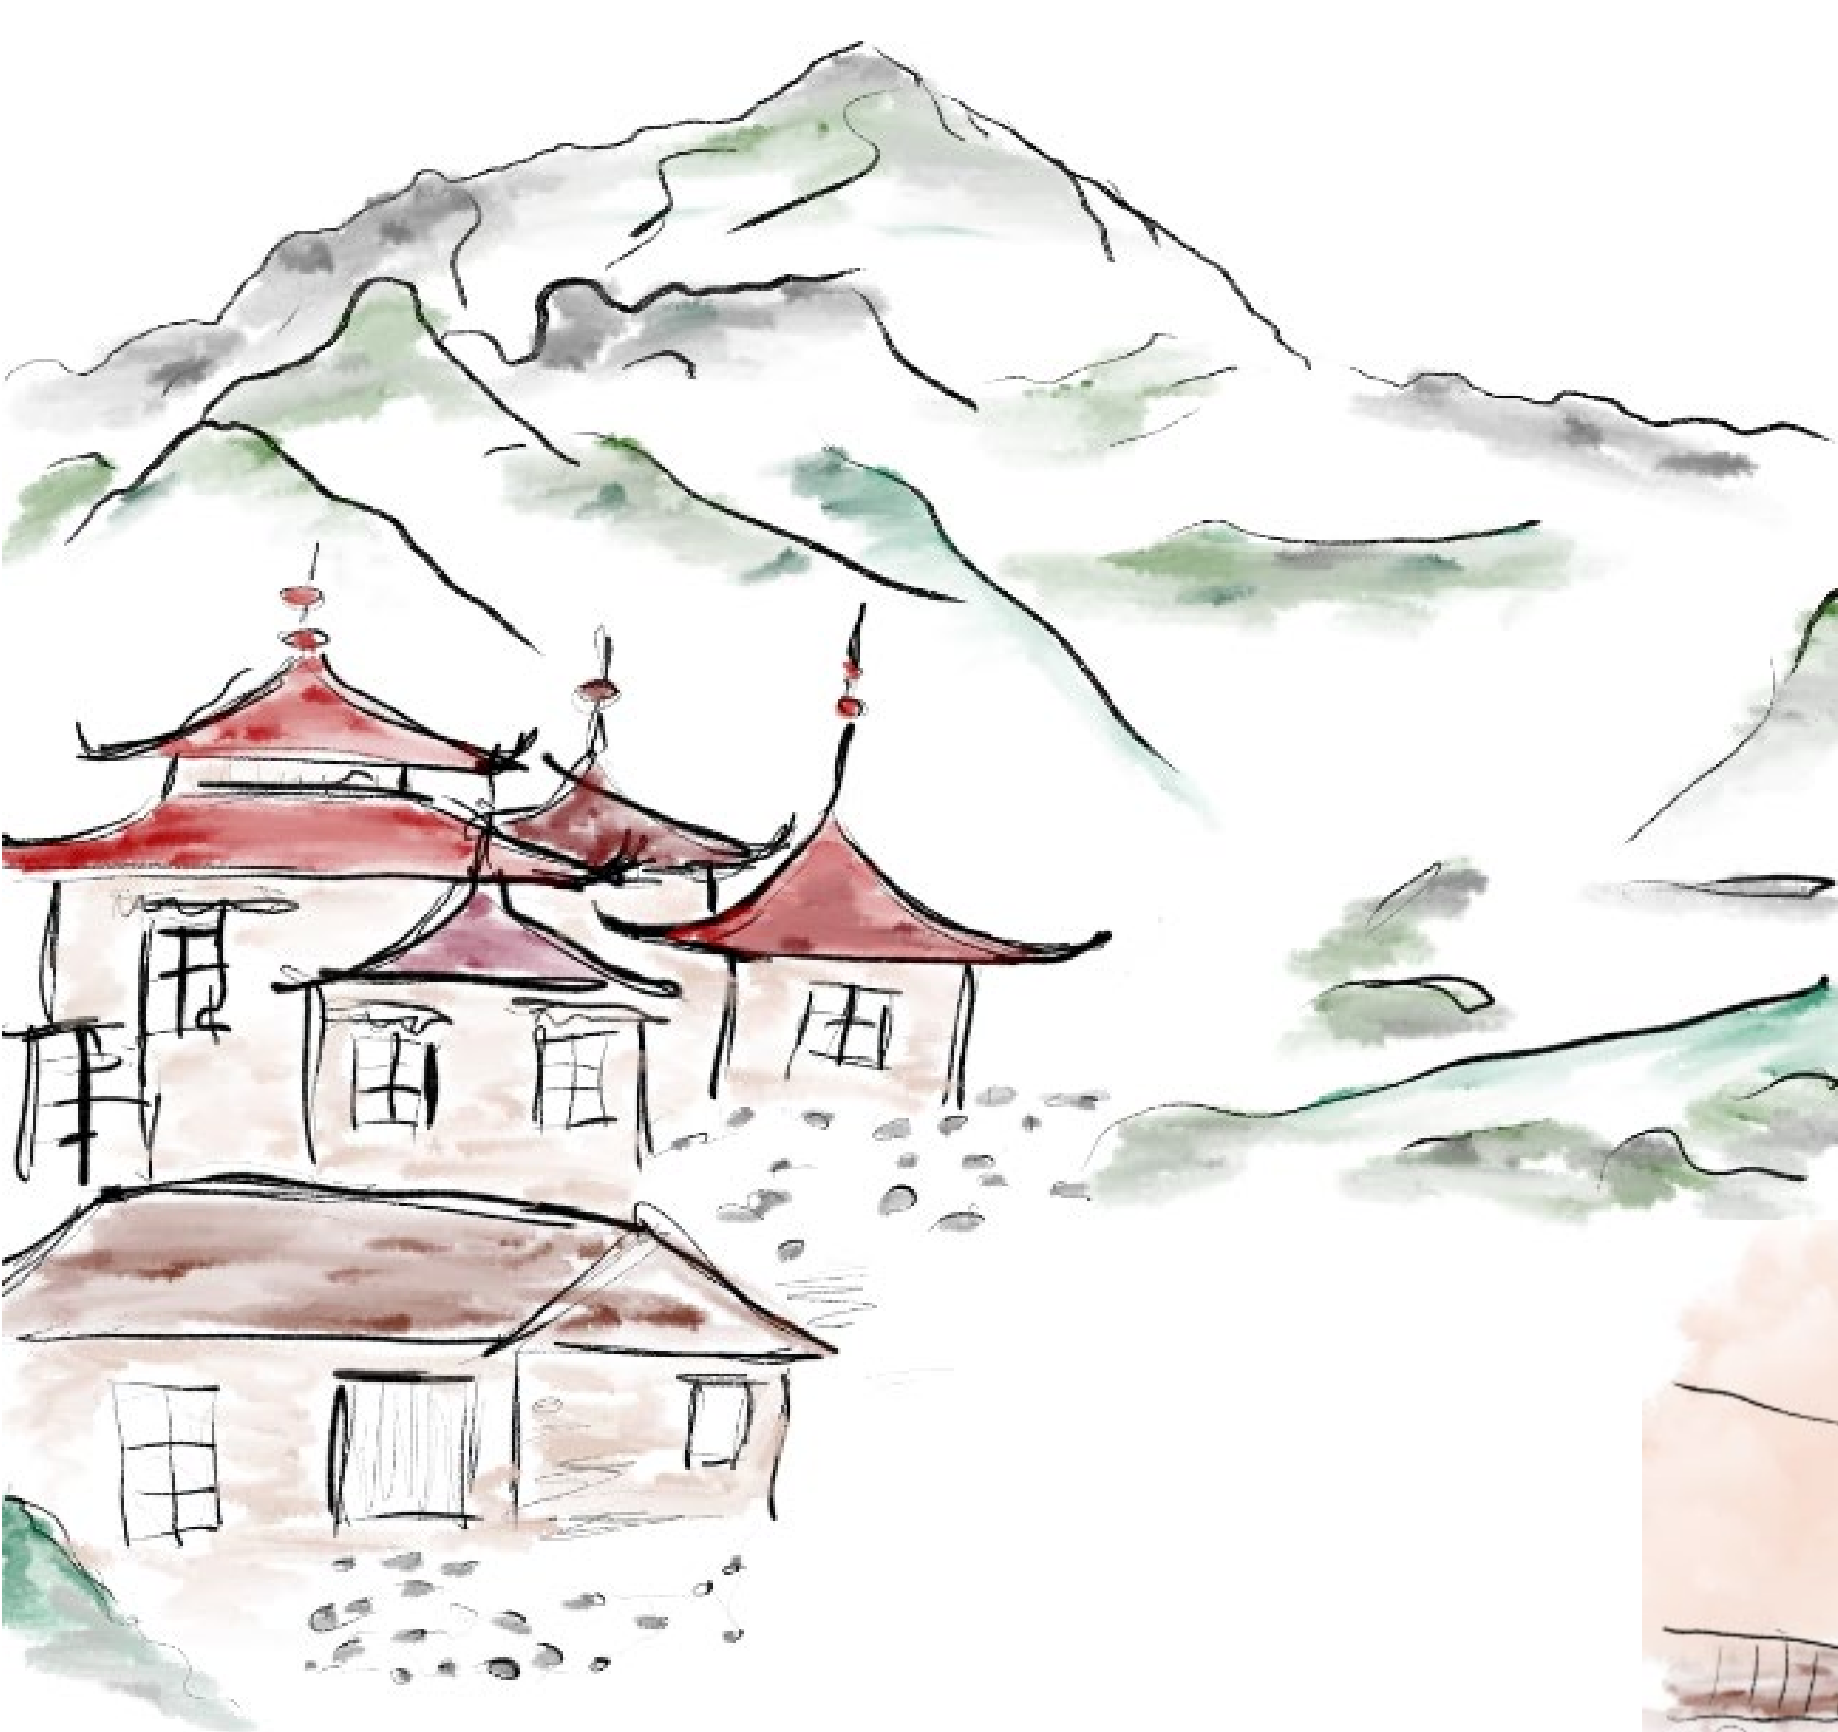

At 18th century Wuhan was struck by a bat plague. At that time I was a chemist, experimenting with a poison to eradicate the bats. But unfortunately my attempt failed and I turned myself into a bat. The people of Wuhan were so afraid of me that they banished me forever to the Himalayas.

O.O

The next day the thunderstorm had stopped and Yamai made her way back. Unsuspectingly she dragged the fours with her. On the way she stopped for a coffee. Here she infected the first people with the Covid-19.

In the next few days, Yamai travels to Europe to begin her long awaited European journey. She saved for this trip a long time ago.

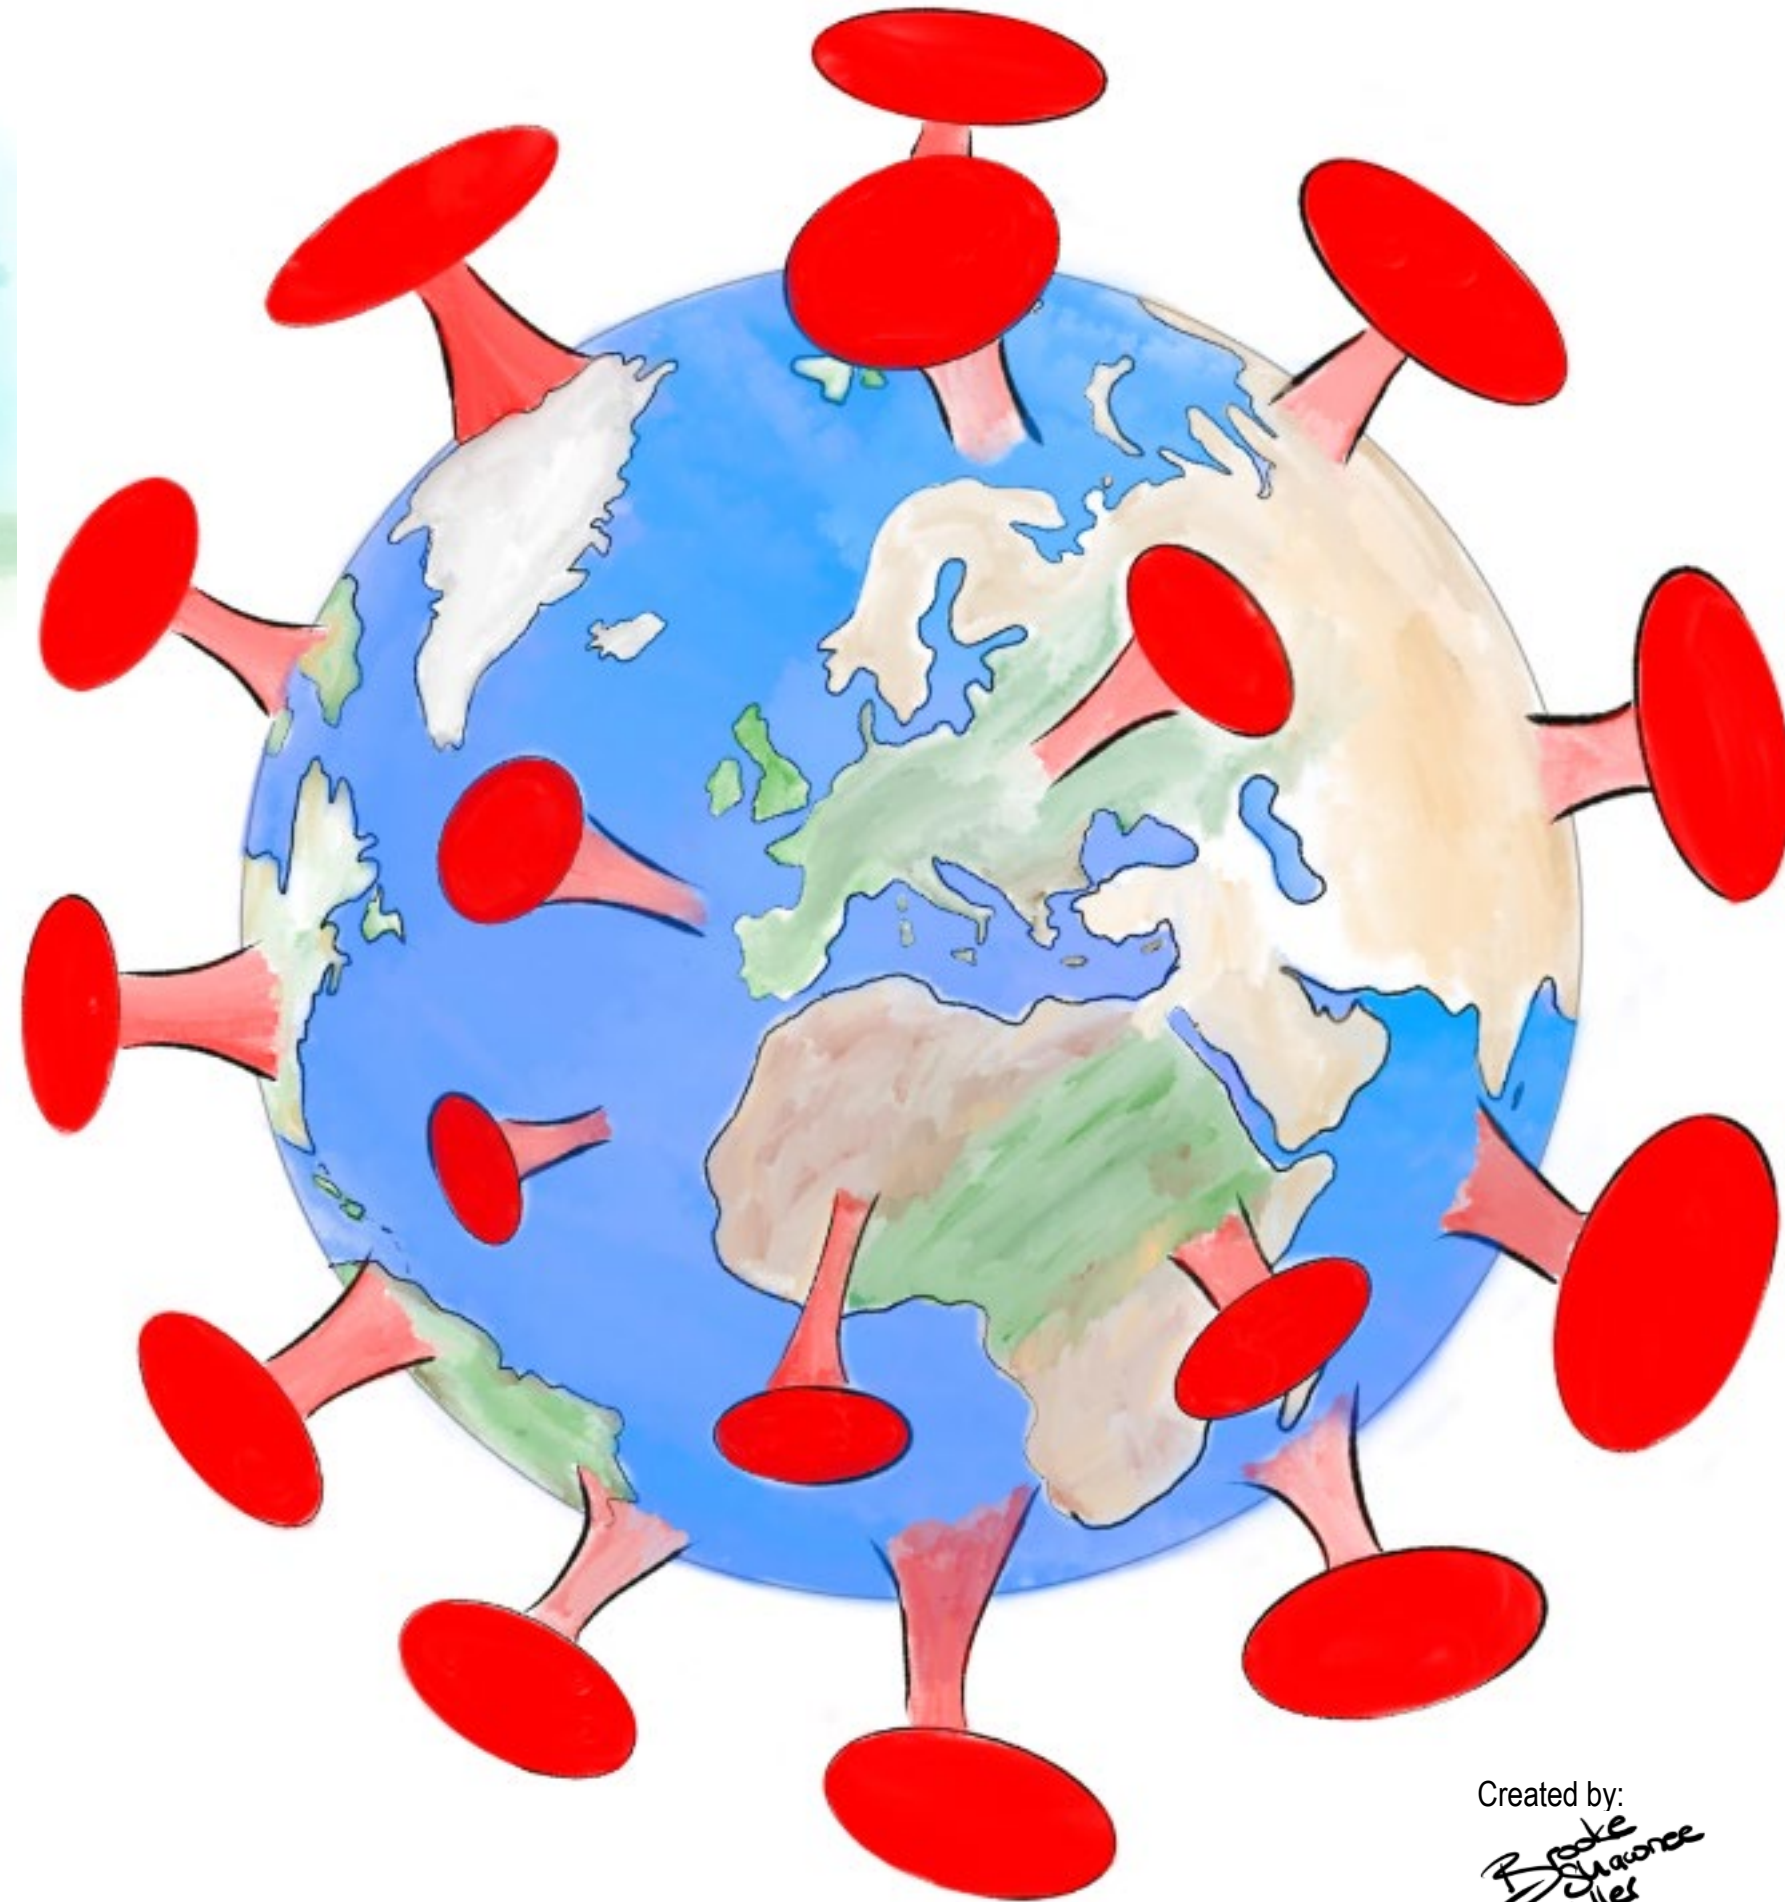

Back in their town. In Wuhan, the virus spread like a forest fire. Because the virus doesn't break out immediately, it has not yet been discovered.

Her first stop is in Italy. And so the virus reached Europe. The Covid-19 deployed. Yamai was not feeling well. She got a bad cough and fever. Covid-19 escaped. From here the virus spreads all over the world.
