

My Covid-19 experience started with the lockdown of our school. All of a sudden we couldn't go there anymore and the semester of homeschooling has begun. We started to get a bunch of spare time and I began to observe the consequences of this disease in the streets of Chur.

It was quickly noticeable that the streets were mostly empty. I started to see a side of the city that I've never seen or experienced anywhere before. With the streets empty I was focusing my attention on other things than people. There were some nice constructions that stood out to me and by looking at them I started hearing this melody in my head.

When I walked up to the Mittenberg I forgot it for a moment but later when I walked back through the city to my home I started hearing it again in my head.

I thought I have to put this idea out of my head and into the world so I started my Sound-Software at home and began to work on it.

I'm sure that this song-idea would not be here right now if everything was normal. In a way the emptiness of the city has led me on a path of other thoughts which I found pretty awesome all the same. So in the end I found a bit of peace for myself.
