We've all been sitting at home for a few weeks now. Completely cut off from the world we know. At some point we run out of ideas about how to spend our time best at home. Because at some point, even Netflix is no longer fun. It feels like the world is standing still and I'm getting tired of it.

An illustration of a person's head from the nose up, with light skin and wide, staring eyes. Their blonde hair is pulled back into a bun. Above their head is a large, dark grey, billowing cloud that fills the upper left portion of the frame. The background is a light, hazy blue-grey.

At some point it was just too much for me.
Well, I've had enough. I have to get out of here

As we make our way back, we suddenly hear steps behind us. As we turn around, we see a woman and wonder where she comes from all of a sudden. As we are talking to her, she tells us about her ritual she has with her boyfriend during Corona.

Because of Corona, the two can no longer meet at each other's homes. As the national borders between Switzerland and Austria are closed. But the two have found a way to see each other anyway during this time. On the summit of the Sarojasaddle the two meet every evening. This is where the border between Liechtenstein and Austria is located.

A quite lovely story, actually. But considering that they met through online dating, wouldn't that have been more suitable during that time?
